

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Entrex affirms no management stock liquidation.

Boca Raton, Fl. February 24, 2020: Entrex management has been accused of liquidating (“dumping”) stock and wants to affirm suppliers, investors and interested parties that in no way has any management from Entrex nor Paul D. Landrew, CEO of UNSS, the merged company, sold any stock.

“One iHub commenter has recently proclaimed that Entrex management has been ‘dumping stock’ along with various other malicious statements to tortuously interfere with UNSS stock trading and our management transition” said Stephen H. Watkins, CEO of Entrex.

“Despite professing ‘inside information’ and admitting to trading on that information any and all statements we have seen are just inaccurate. What is most naïve about this commenter is that stock has not even been allocated pending the final 2019 audit; which I understand should be provided in advance of the due date. Only then shall the Entrex shareholders even be provided shares to do as they chose.”

“And one iHub commenter has gone so far as physically threaten management which we have addressed with both iHub and law enforcement professionals.” Watkins continued.

“Most investors would understand that management would typically have restricted stock and therefore only via certain milestones could liquify – and pursuant to the Securities and Exchange Commission’s rules -- various management might need to file Forms 3, 4 and 5 (and/or others) as advised by Counsel if and when management insiders receive and/or sell shares.”
